WEATHER

WEATHER BY REGION:

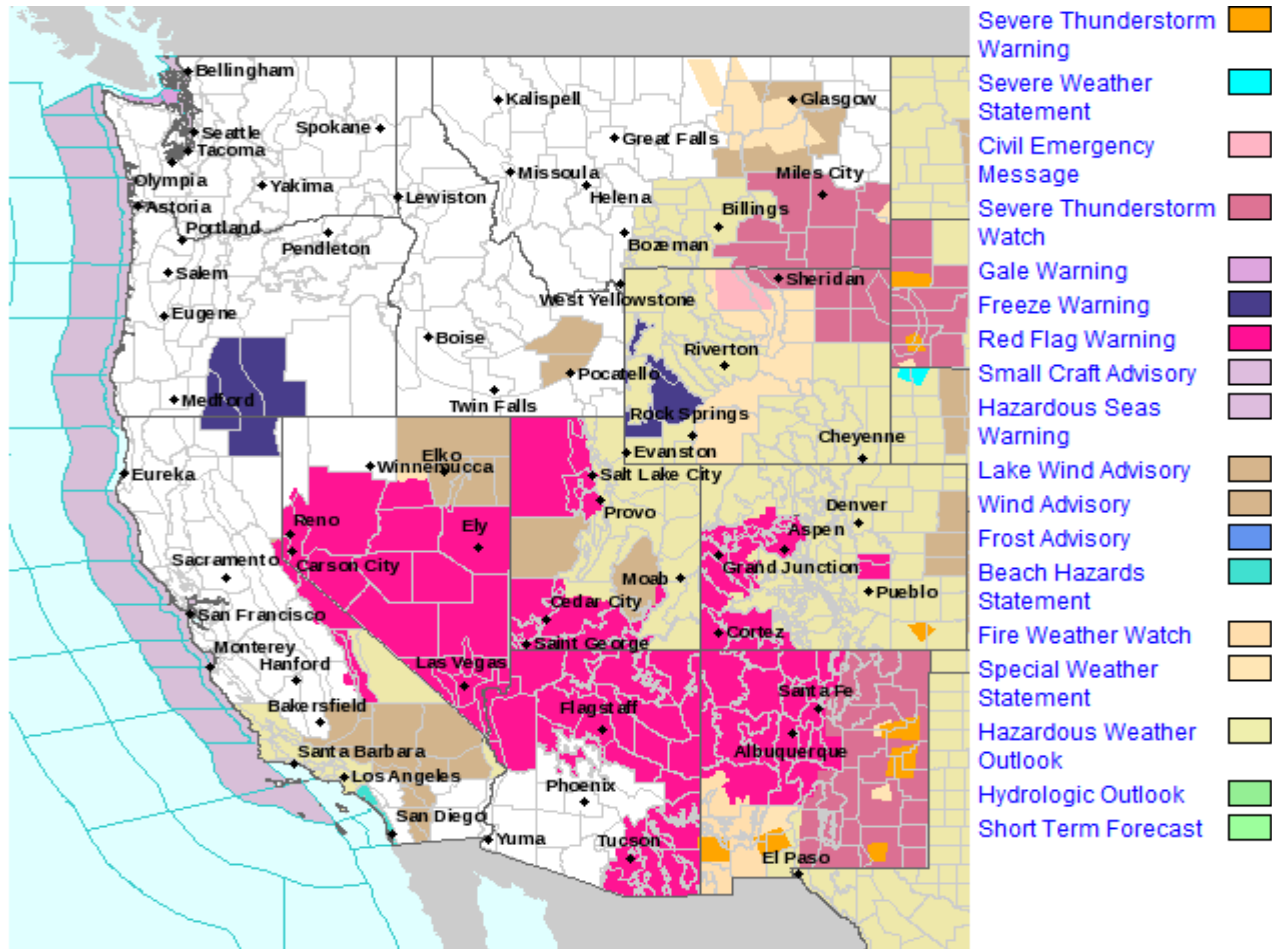

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA:

A strong low pressure system is moving through the northern part of the state with the strongest winds associated with this low occurring to the east and south of the North Ops area this afternoon. The North Ops area will remain somewhat breezy with near normal temperatures through Monday as a weakening low pressure trough remains over the area. Skies will be partly cloudy with high clouds and afternoon cumulus buildups, but precipitation is not expected during the 7-Day period. A weak trailing front associated with the low pressure area will drag through the North Ops area. A Northwest-Northeast surface wind pattern will follow the front tonight, with the strongest gusts reaching 20-25 mph in and around the Sacramento Valley early Saturday. Lighter Northwest-Northeast surface winds are expected during nights and mornings through the middle of next week. A gradual warming trend will take place next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

The storm system which brought windy conditions to portions of the Sierras yesterday continues to churn slowly eastward. The flow behind this system has turned more northwesterly which will cause winds to be slightly weaker across the upper elevations of the Sierras. There will be areas of northwest winds of 15-25 mph with infrequent wind gusts to 45 mph possible along the Crest eastward into Mono County and the Owens Valley throughout the day. There was poor recovery in this area last night and minimum relative humidity (RH) will quickly drop to around 10% in this area by late morning. Elsewhere, a tight pressure gradient will generate west winds of 20-30 mph with gusts to 45 mph from the Tehachapi Mountains eastward into the central Mojave as well as the Banning Pass this afternoon. This weekend, a slow warming trend is expected and by Monday and Tuesday, highs will be back in the 90s in the valleys. No thunderstorms are expected during the next 7 days.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

Situational Summary

On January 17, 2014 Governor Edmund G. Brown proclaimed a State of Emergency and directed state officials to take all necessary actions to prepare for drought conditions. The State Operation Center (SOC) is activated to implement objectives in support of the Governor's priorities. The lack of winter rain and snowfall has resulted in extremely dry conditions in many parts of the State. Reservoir levels are down significantly from where they should be on average for this time of year. If conditions continue without substantial rainfall, severe impacts to municipal water supplies, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities are likely in store for the State over the next few months. Negative economic impacts will also result.

*As our state's rainy season comes to an end, it is highly unlikely that precipitation totals will increase significantly. This winter's below average rain and snowfall worsens conditions in this third straight dry year.

The drought could result in severe impacts to the municipal water supplies, wells, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities for several months. The SOC continues to be activated to monitor the situation statewide, and support regional and local operational areas.

- The Taskforce continues to meet regularly to take actions that conserve water and coordinate state response to the drought.
- The final manual snowpack survey of the season was conducted on Thursday (May 1) and showed California snowpack at 18% of normal.
- DWR has announced that water essential for health and safety will be delivered through the state water project. The current State Water Project Allocation is 5%.
- Cal OES continues to gather drought-related costs from state agencies and local governments.
